

FROM THE DIRECTORS

July 2014

Dear Friends —

As we write this letter, summer has fully come alive in Minneapolis and with it renewed vitality following an arduous winter.

Minneapolis is a vital city. Together with our neighbor cities, Minneapolis is consistently ranked as the best place for families, the healthiest, most bikeable, even the “most playful.” And in 2014, for the second consecutive year, nationally recognized as the top park system among the 50 largest U.S. cities.

Some might stop there, but we think being “the best” is a quality to build on. The Minneapolis Parks Foundation is dedicated to enhancing our community’s vitality by securing knowledge, ability and resources to improve and sustain a legacy of world-class parks.

Our focus in 2013 reflected this dedication. In these pages, we share some highlights of our parks-making and education programs. We also highlight a few of the ways that parks benefit our community’s — your — health, economically, ecologically, and in terms of personal wellbeing. Great parks cannot be taken for granted, nor are they a luxury.

Our supporters responded to our focus by deepening commitments to our mission and community through multi-year pledges, a first for the Parks Foundation. We developed strong foundation relationships that laid the groundwork for renewed and increased support early this year. We also elected seven new Directors — Dorothy Bridges, Ryan Burnet, John Crosby, Caren Dewar, Tom Paul, Thomas O. Pohlard, and Liz Wielinski. Now in 2014, the Minneapolis Parks Foundation is as vital as ever, both as an organization and in service to our community.

With the Twin Cities hosting the 2017 International Urban Parks Conference and the 2018 Super Bowl, we’re well motivated to invest in vital places. RiverFirst and Water Works, our two signature projects that together will enhance 11 miles of the Mississippi Riverfront with new parks and trails, are within our reach and with them the potential for one of the greatest transformations this city has ever seen.

In a few short weeks, the Parks Foundation will welcome a new Executive Director who will lead our advocacy for Minneapolis parks and bring RiverFirst to life. We are enthusiastic about our future, both as an organization and for our community. We are grateful for the contributors whose support makes it possible. Thank you!

Sincerely,

Dan Avchen

The mission of the Minneapolis Parks Foundation is to help ensure the economic, environmental, civic and cultural health of Minneapolis and the region by creating the Next Generation of Parks™ to meet the demands and reflect the values of our generation and those to follow.

Environmental Health

The 2,500-mile Mississippi River corridor is one of four migratory flyways in North America, as well as a globally singular ecosystem that drains a watershed stretching from the Rocky Mountains to the Appalachians and encompasses all or part of 32 states.

Because of its urban setting and depauperation (lack of plants/animals), the Minneapolis Upper Riverfront hasn't been a priority for habitat restoration.

The Next Generation of Parks™ will ...

- Manage and clean our water
- Restore healthy native habitats
- Create economic and recreation opportunities

Civic Health

99% of Minneapolis residents think our parks are a "unique and valuable asset."¹

Minneapolis parks hosted more than 342 special events in 2013.²

The Next Generation of Parks™ will ...

- Meet the needs of diverse users
- Be gathering places
- Create opportunities for cultural expression

Economic Health

The total cost benefit of Minneapolis municipal trees is about $15.7M, based on U.S. Forest Service data that establishes the ROI on public trees is $1.59 for every $1 invested.³

Small businesses rank parks, recreation and open space amenities as the most important quality-of-life factors when choosing a location.⁴

Knowledge workers prefer communities that offer a diverse range of outdoor recreational activities.⁵

The Next Generation of Parks™ will ...

- Enhance our quality-of-life
- Attract people
- Encourage economic development

Wellbeing

96% of Minneapolis residents think our parks and lakes play a key role in physical health and wellness.⁶

People who move to park-like areas have "significant and long-lasting improvements in mental health."⁷

The Next Generation of Parks™ will ...

- Engage youth and adults in physical activity
- Be places to reflect and connect
- Integrate with non-motor transportation

2013 PROJECT HIGHLIGHTS

Parks Projects

RiverFirst Initiative

Co-developed and implemented the RiverFirst Initiative, a first-of-its-kind partnership between the private sector and the Minneapolis Park & Recreation Board and the City of Minneapolis. Managed the production of the RiverFirst Finance Strategy and initiated the first formal public-private fundraising partnership agreement with the Park Board.

Water Works – A RiverFirst Signature Project

Funded, launched and co-managed with the Park Board the schematic design process for a signature park destination near the Stone Arch Bridge, including setting project goals and desired outcomes, design team selection process, community engagement and concept development.

Education Programs

Next Generation of Parks™ Lecture Series

Presented two of the world's top parks designers: Adriaan Geuze of West 8 and Eelco Hooftman of GROSS.MAX.

Research Assistant in Practice

Researched and mapped strategic future park locations in Minneapolis, along with potential parks-making partners.

SiteSeeing Youth Design Curriculum

Engaged North Minneapolis youth in designing a new park and public space in their neighborhood near Bassett Creek.
